

4 March 2008

Rugby Rangers Praised by Local Resident

A resident commended Rugby Rangers this month after he needed medical attention during a visit to the town centre. The Rangers came to the aid of Adam Carlton, from Overslade, after he began to suffer chest pains when walking through the town.

Following a radio call from the Sandwich Bar in town to the Rugby BID control room, Rangers were alerted that a man needed medical attention straight away. Two rangers were soon attending to Mr Carlton and an ambulance was called. "Two Rangers came to my assistance, while one sat with me the other went to make sure the ambulance could get through to me. I couldn't have asked for more and I was very grateful for their help," said Mr Carlton.

"A number of our Rangers have completed their first aid training. It is incidents like these that highlight how worthwhile this training is and what an impact it can have within our community," said Aftab Gaffar, Operations Director of the Rugby BID Company. "The Rangers help people every day in so many different ways from helping reunite lost children with their parents, supporting local businesses through to helping with situations where people need medical attention and it's all part of their daily routine."

"I think the Rangers are fantastic and they do such a good job. They have a very noticeable presence around Rugby Town Centre and I've seen them help so many people, now including me," ended Mr Carlton.